Nana's Homestay in London

by Nana Matsuoka

Nana Matsuoka, a college student from Japan, had a wonderful homestay in London. She lived with a British family and studied English.

“What do you want for your 19th birthday?” my parents asked me. “A ring,” I replied. However, instead of a ring, my parents gave me a homestay in London.

On February 11, I left Japan. On the plane, I worried about being all alone there – a stranger to London. But when I met the Flannery family (my host family), their warm welcome made me feel at ease. Both my host father and mother were very kind and *treated me like their own (1).

Getting Ready to Go

Before going to London, I did some research on English schools in London and chose OHC (Oxford House College), mainly because it had *reasonable fees. Also, there weren't many Japanese students at OHC.

I took my parents' (2) and requested that my homestay family have both a mother and a father, be native-born, non-smoking, middle-class British people, and live near a subway station. I later found that this was very good advice, since some of my friends at the English school were having problems with their host families.

Living in London

My host family lived in an apartment in London. It was very close to a subway station, so it was easy for me to travel around the city. I visited the (3) sites in London. I study art history, so the museums were my favorite places. The British Museum is one of the most famous museums in the world. Also, there were many historic buildings in London. I enjoyed visiting Buckingham palace, The Tower of London, Westminster Abbey, and so on. They made me feel the history.

Potatoes! It took me a little time to *get used to the many kinds of potato dishes served: fried potatoes, steamed potatoes, sliced potatoes, and different-colored potatoes. My host family mother was a good (4). She made delicious pasta and chicken dishes and even cooked rice for me. Also, (a)[how / she / make / me / taught / potato dishes / to], and now I make them at home.

Carole, a French girl, was another homestay student living with us, and we often went around London together. On Saturdays, my host family would have a party at home with friends or family. When we returned from touring London, Carole and I would join the (5). On Saturday evenings, Mr. and Mrs. Flannery would go to their favorite *pub to spend time together.

Spending School life

Although I selected a school with few Japanese students, there were still at least two in each class. In class, I tried to speak English a lot, but many Japanese students didn't use English very much (even if they had large *vocabularies), and spoke only (6) with their friends.

Sometimes, I asked other people their *impression of Japan. "Japanese people work too hard," said my French friend. My teacher thought that Japanese people were very rich. I did not agree with these points, but I was very interested in knowing what foreign people thought. My homestay in London made me realize that speaking English was very (7) because it is the language that people from many countries use the most. I would like to be more open-minded about people from different countries, like my host family.

Going back to Japan

I was sad when I left London on March 9, but I'll never (8) my wonderful time there. My host father and mother told me that they want to visit Japan for sightseeing in a few years.
